THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF.

No. V

The extracts of this evening will be read with much interest. They contain an examination of Wilkinson's defence. Fortunately he felt it necessary to attempt a defence; and in its fabrication it was impossible to avoid the mention of circumstances; these he was obliged to try to connect together : added to which he was also obliged to state both sums and dates; though he avoided both, with all the caution and trepidation that a guilty conscience continually suggested. He however, could not so entirely steer clear of what lay before him, but that he was occasionally compelled to place his foot where it left its track, by which to follow him and secret him out.

" Proofs of the corruption of gen. James Wilkinson and of his connection with Aaron Burr," &c.

Having established the receipt of the mo ney, let us now enquire to what account it is placed by the general and his friends.-Here every one who has at all attended to the nature of his defence, must have remarked a studied obscurity, a confusion of dates, sums and circumstances that evidently show a design to avoid inquiry.

The charge was a serious one. It came forward in a respectable shape; it merited an answer. The general thought so too .-He clamored for injury, but never sought it. Instead of defending his own character, he attacked that of his accusers, and flattered himself that the public attention was withdrawn from his infamy, while it was only astonished at the boldness of his calumny. If the monies received from the Spanish government were the proceeds of a commercial speculation, how easily might his accusers have been covered with confusion? All that would have been necessary was the exhibition of an account, designating the sums he had received, and showing how they become due. I have received, he might have said, 6000 dollars by Ballinger, 6000 by Collins, 9640 by Power: but they were the proceeds of a fair trade, and here are the accounts to support it. This is so natural a course for innocence to have pursued, that we cannot but suspect guilt when we see it departed from : a balance for each year would have humbled his enemies in the dust, and his character would have been the more firmly established from

n answer to the charge of he

Wilkinson's commercial engagements were exclusively with the Spanish government of Louisiana, after his first voyage; of course the cash he received was from the government of the country, and this he received in person, on his bills or by remittance thro' various channels. The last payment was made him in the year 1789, through his agent Philip Nolan, being a balance which had arisen on the recovery of some tobacco, which after it had been delivered was damaged and lost in the year 1788." This is the only passage of his justification in which he even alludes to any sums received, or endeavors to give any account of the consideration for which they were paid. If he received money as he says in person, he can tell the amount. If he drew bills, the sums and the parties may be shown.! If he received remittances, there can be no difficulty in designating them, and showing by the other side of the account the consideration for which they were paid. These vouchers would be infinitely more satisfactory to the public than general Knox's letters, or than my memoire to the secretary of state with which he has enriched his de-

General Wilkinson did not do this because HE DID NOT DARE TO EXHIBIT HIS AC-COUNT. He knew the original accounts were in my hands, and that they were signed by him and his agents, and that the result of their examination would destroy him forever. It appears, however, that before the court of enquiry he aid produce some accounts which have been carefully kept from the public eve. But the result is stated in the sentence and is extremely important in this investigation. The Sentence (No. 26) states, 1st. "That it does not appear that he received any money from the Spanish government, or any of its officers, since the year 1791.

2d. That it does appear by the general's statement, that his agents several years after '91, received and remitted to him several sums for tobacco, which had been stored as damaged in the year 1789." It is to be remembered that the court of inquiry did not think proper to state the amount of these several sums, or to designate at least the years in which they were paid, that we have compared them with other payments. Not having the aid which the account exhibited to the court of inquiry would have afforded, I must use the materials I have; they will, I believe, be amply sufficient .--We have it from the general's admission, as stated in the sentence, that he received no money from the government or any of its officers for tobacco or other produce, since the year '91. But I have incontrovertibly shown, that the sum of 6000 dollars by Owens, of 6333 by Collins, and of 9640 by Powers, were all received from the government or its officers long after the year 1791. They were then by his own confession, not received for tobacco. On what account then were they paid? -It does not appear from whom the sum of 6590 dollars, mentioned in the letter to Adair, was received. whether from his agent Nolan, or from the officers of government. I do no not therefore include it in the above calculation, but added to those three sums, they form a total of 28,563 dollars, which were all received after '91. Now admitting them to be the produce of the damaged tobacco, and that this damaged tobacco had sold as well as that which was merchantable, there must have been at least 570 hogeheads: an extraordinary quantity to have laid forgotten so many years. But I do not rely, though I safely might, on the evident absurdity of ! no doubt on this point, and I hasten to fulfil my engagement.

with a small cargo in 1787, and that in Auhis agent for the disposal of all the property he sent down previous to the partnership. The day after that connection was formed, e previous accounts were made out, settled and signed by both parties. (See No. 27.) This settlement presents a payment of $335 to major Dunn for balance, and shows that 3000 dollars out of 10,000, the thers the archduke Lewis was dangerously whole amount of the sales, had been advanced to Wilkinson a year before the produce came down, and that the produce was drawn for, in favor of different persons to whom he owed money. It also appears by this statement, that Mr. Clark acknowledge ed to have on hand a quantity of tobacco in bulk, weight unknown, and also other parcels amounting to eight hogsheads, for which he made himself accountable when sold .-None of the monies therefore which I have shown to have been paid to gen. Wilkinson Instead of this, what is done? Why the arose out of any commercial transaction from the island Lobau across the Danube. general publishes in his Plain Tale, where, prior to the 8th of August, 1788. On that The ground and an immense quantity of ar-

pecific sums of money from the Spanish commenced. The accounts of that partnergovernment, all he says is this: "his [gen. | ship from the 1st May, 1789, were settled on that day, and a balance of 2681 dollars then paid to capt. Abner M. Dunn, the brother of one of the partners. The gross amount of sales by this account appears to be 16,441 dollars. At the foot of it is added the receipt of Mr. Dunn, for the bal- shewed himself in great numbers on ance. (See No. 28.)

By this account the balance appears to have been paid to captain A. B. Dunn, and was by him taken round by sea to his brother, the partner of Wilkinson in Kentucky.

On the 5th of September in the same year, general Wilkinson was at New Orleans, and there made another settlement, by which it appears that a balance only of 491 dollars in his favor, which was paid to Nolan, his agent, by his order, (See No. 29) and of course, that the sum of 6000 dollars stated by Ballinger and Mr. Jones to have been taken up in this year could not have proceeded from any of his commercial operations. An inspection of the account will show that the large payments were always made either in advance to Wilkinson himself, or to his order in favor of different persons to whom he was indebted. This account is signed by Wilkinson himself, and closes the accounts of the partnership, which, as we have stated, was dissolved on the 18th of the same month. (See No. 4.) In this settlement the tobacco which is mentioned as loose, and weight unknown, in the first account settled Ly major Dunn, is accounted for, and appears to have amounted only to 974 dollars.

Thus all the tobacco transactions up to the 18th, September, 1789, are distinctly placed before the public-they must of necessity have entered into the partnership accounts, and those accounts are annexed; and let it be remembered that it is to this year, 1789, that the general and the court of enquiry refer for the shipments which are to account for the enormous sums which he has been proved to have received. It should also be remarked that the periodical rise of water taking place from February to June, after that period, except on extraordinary occasions, the accounts of the year close in the commerce between the Ohio and New Orleans, and therefore not much more can be expected from the accounts of this year; but there is still a portion of the time and a remnant of the transaction to be elucidated, and I will not leave a day or cent unaccounted for.

Prior to the dissolution of the partnership Mr. Clark had sent up the river on the joint account, a boat called the Speedwell, with a cargo amounting to about 8000 dollars. This not being included in the settlement. Wilkinson, as appears by the document before referred to, (No. 4) agrees that he will invest the proceeds in good tobacco, and ship it to New Orleans on their joint account in the month of December next; and that when he has fulfilled this and another undertaking of the same nature, with respect to a debt he was authorised to collect, then the partnership should cease.

man who had lived long in a state of rot felicity with his wife, experienced much unhappiness from their mutual of accommodation on the only point on h they ever differed. The reader is ess prepared to expect that the subject ercation was important. No; it was ng more nor less than this, the husband moderately fond of eel-pye, to which ife had an utter and insurmountasle an. The husband was always wishing worite dish upon the table, and the wife solutely protests against it. A beautiful who was an occasional visitor of the faand a Cyprian damsel to boot, designmake a conquest of the husband's heart for that purpose invited him to dine with n what she declared was her favorite eel pye. The invitation was accepted. avor led to the indulgence of another, the bed of his spouse was as much a ger to her spouse as her table. The Cyan damsel, to perpetuate the conquest she made, still introduced the favorite dish, the unhappy man's appetite was cloved it, and he ventured to remonstrate. was all to no purpose; the courtes in ed the complaint to proceed from deliof offence to her, and still plied his pawith eel-pye with more inveteracy than ver. The result of the whole matter was, at the husband by such reiterated indulice, contracted an insurmountable averin to his favorite dish : returned to the taand the bed of his wife, and could never rwards think of his former attachment out loathing. The use Messrs. Editors, wish to make of this story is this :- Supse the eel-pye to mean that liberty which very American professes to regard and re-In order to preserve our reverence Tthis principle, almost every public paper cems with its value. the French, always prolifick in bad exand who may be cited in almost every political instance as presents to avoid, have given evidence of the truth of this assertion. In the outset of their revolution, liberty was the incessant subject of their admiration. The Marseilles Hymn was commanded, under a heavy penalty, to be sung in the Theatres, and vive la libertie was the incessant cry of those demagogues. In process of time they despised the name of liberty so much that the official paper of their government, the Moniteur, termed the Americans Republican bears. Generally such extravagance of encomium counteracts its own efforts and produces the evil attempted to be avoided by it-apathy and indifference. It leads further to the supposition that those who adopt such artifices are not sincere in their professions. A man who can give no other evidence of his attachment to the liberty of his country than eulogiums on its value, may hereby be justly suspected, as that is a kind of evidence which the most consummate tyrant may, and usually is, the most ready to offer.

TOLEN, from the subscriber, near Elkor run church, in the county of Fauquier, on the night of the 9th instant, a stout made bright bay HORSE, about 15 hands high, 11 or 12 years old last spring, he has a few saddle galis on his back without hair, and several small white spots produced from the saddle, his left fore and hinder foot white as high as the ancle, shod all round with smooth heel shoes, with but three nails in the outer part of the shoe on the left hind foot.

I am apprehensive he has been taken by a man of the name of HEYDEN, from Maryland, woo was liberated from the county of Culpepper a few days since where he has been imprisoned since last spring for similar acts, as he was seen making towards Alexandria-on Sunday, upon a horse that answers the description.

HEYDEN is about 5 feet 10 inches high light hair, his face remarkably red with scars resembling those of the small pox, produced from pimples with which his face is very generally covered

I will give the above reward for the apprehension of the thief, with the horse, so as he may be brought to justice, or Ten Dollars for information of the horse so that he may be recovered.

THE subscriber proposes erecting at the Centre Mills, near alexandria, a Machine for carding Wool, and expects to have it ready to run by the 30th of the present month. It will card the wool and form itinto rolls for the spinning wheel, or into batts for hatters, or other purposes. The advantage of having wool prepared by these machines for the purpose of manufacturing islo yarn over that which is carded by hand, a generally acknowledged, as being the cheap. pst and most perfect in its operation. Those ersons who may incline to give encouragement to this establishment, may depend of the utmost punctuality as to time and unremitted attention in the execution of the work. The wool when carded into rolls will be packed in such manner as to preserve uin the most perfect state for spinning, and may be transported any reasonable distance without injury. Wool, sent to the carder, must be cleun washed, clear of burrs, small stickser Malaga Raif other extraneous matter, and as orted in such manner as may suit the owner; and each quality shall be kept seperate. The expence of carding will be eight cents for that which is made into rolls, and five cents for batts per lb payable at the time of delivering, or payment will be received in wool of good quality at 40 cents per pound, as may suit the convenience of the owner.
